Investment Sales Fiesta!

It's been a banner year for investment sales in DC. And with several big-money assets on the block, the party isn't likely to end soon. (If you've got windows and a lobby, there's a buyer out there for you.)

Here's investment sales vet Bill Kaye with colleague and investment associate Owen Claypool, donning some fresh Colliers hats having each just joined the firm from CBRE this week. Bill, who's been tapped to oversee Colliers' investment sales practice in the DC region, says the sales wave fixes to keep on going, with notable properties like 1801 K, Sentinel Square in NoMa, the Washington Post site, and 1110 Vermont, among others, all on the market and the object of affection for both domestic and foreign investors.

CREW Does Retail

According to Streetsense's Heather Arnold (left), there's one thing both Democrats and Republicans can agree on: DC's retail scene is hot. (Though some question lingers about whether retail therapy should be covered under Obamacare.) Such was the mood at a CREW DC luncheon on Monday, where Heather moderated a panel including David von Storch (founder of Capitol City Brewing Co, VIDA Fitness, and Bang Salon), Safeway's Avis Black, DLA Piper and CREW DC prez Betsy Karmin, and Donatelli Development prez Chris Donatelli.

EagleBank Golfs for Breast Cancer

The EagleBank Foundation held its annual Fight for Breast Cancer golf outing on Monday at Trump National in Sterling, raising over $300k for research and outreach programs at DC-area hospitals. Over 225 golfers participated, and the winner's were The Nest Egg's Sean O'Shields, EagleBank's Dan Laurenzi, EagleBank Foundation chairman Don Rogers, Mervis Diamond chief Ronnie Mervis, and CameronBlue Capital's Jeff Goettman (not pictured).
