Cooler Cars in DC Real Estate

We knew you all were golfers, hunters, and fisherpeople. But gearheads, too? Today we'll show you which DC real estate pros have the sweetest rides.

WFT Engineering's Sully Sullivan purchased this 1968 Dodge Dart convertible in 1977 for $600. And like a commodity office building, it needed a ton of work, having a blown engine, ripped top and seats, and a broken transmission. But after 35 years (and four rebuilds), Sully says he's got the machine looking like new, including recently putting a 440 ci Mopar magnum engine. When he's not fixing this red beauty up, Sully's working on several projects including Pike & Rose and the spaces of Teach for America and the Federal Reserve Board.

You deserve to be on top.

Let us show what more looks like.

Lincoln Property Co's Joe Falcone bought this '69 Camaro SS seven years back and—sensing a theme here?—fully restored it from front to back. "I wish I had more time to drive it," Joe tells us.

Cambridge

Eataly to Capitol Crossing?

The NYC-bred concept has had DC in its sights for years, but it's apparently found its landing spot at PGP's 2M SF Capitol Crossing project on top of 395. (Aren't land-grabby Italians part of the reason WW I started?) UrbanTurf reported yesterday that the Italian food market has signed an LOI for 30k SF to 35k SF at the project, which just began site work but won't deliver until 2017 at the earliest. PGP declined comment on the rumors.
